

Journalism on Tap

Atlantic Media is pleased to partner with the area chapters of the Asian-American, Black, and Hispanic Journalists Associations for a lively discussion on political reporting.

Race and Gender in Today's Elections: Headlining News or Clever Distraction?

The 2008 election marks the first time either an African American or a woman will be their party's nominee for president. But is that really the news? Have domestic and international issues taken a backseat to gender and race? Do race and gender affect how media covers presidential candidates? How can the media effectively cover the issues that are most important?

Moderator - Linda Douglass, National Journal Group

Marc Ambinder, The Atlantic
Chris Cilliza, Washington Post
Brian DeBose, Washington Times

Deborah Mathis, BlackAmericaWeb.com
Gebe Martinez, Politico
Ed O'Keefe, washingtonpost.com

When: Wednesday, March 26
Where: Atlantic Media Company
600 New Hampshire Ave NW
Washington, DC 20037
Details: 6:00 PM - Registration/Check-in (8th Floor)
6:30 PM - Panel discussion
7:30 PM - Networking reception

To reserve your space, please RSVP to Emily McIntire at emcintire@nationaljournal.com or call 202-266-7000 by March 21st.

Atlantic Media - A Growing Force in American Publishing